Travis Scott canceled Thursday night's concert in Buffalo at the last minute amid rumors he may have cheated on girlfriend Kylie Jenner.

The KeyBank Center announced just before 5 p.m. Thursday that the "Sicko Mode" rapper would postpone his concert due to illness. The show has been rescheduled for March 10.

Fans may request refunds at the point of purchase or use their tickets for the new date.

"Buffalo I'm so sorry I can't perform tonight. I'm under the weather and it f---ing sucks! Can't pull up without full rage," Scott tweeted.

TMZ reports Jenner found "evidence" Scott was cheating on her and he flew back to L.A. to "deal with it." The alleged affair comes days after Jenner's sister Khloe Kardashian learned NBA star Tristan Thompson allegedly cheated on her with Jenner's best friend Jordyn Woods.

Scott, however, denies cheating on Jenner, the mother of his 1-year-old child Stormi.

"Travis Scott vehemently denies he cheated on Kylie. It is not true. He did not cheat," his rep told ET. "He cancelled one show tonight because he is under the weather."

Jenner has not publicly addressed the rumors. She was spotted out Thursday night with friends, TMZ reported. Scott was not with her.

Due to illness, tonight's Travis Scott concert has been postponed until March 10th, 2019. Tickets for tonight's concert will be honored on March 10.

Refunds, if required, are available at point of purchase.
